Work with us

Shaping the global response to long lives

Ways to work with us

We work with funders, governments and businesses on a commissioned, funded or retained basis. We curate the evidence and get it in front of the people who need to see it.

Global research and grants

From a single report to a multi-year programme, we combine quantitative modelling, economic analysis, policy research and qualitative insight.

Global convening

Few organisations run a fringe event at a UK party conference one week and a side event at the UN General Assembly or a G20 summit the next – we can. We bring policymakers and influencers together across the world.

Consultancy

We provide strategic intelligence and consultancy on demographic change and ageing, working with globally recognised experts. We build bespoke learning programmes connecting business leaders to the policymakers and innovators shaping the longevity economy.

Our recent work

In 30 years, we have published over 450 reports and organised more than 600 events across 20 countries. We have:

- Created the Healthy Ageing and Prevention Index, an online tool ranking 153 countries to hold governments to account and track progress on healthy ageing.
- Held events from the World Health Assembly to the fringes of the G20, WHO and UN assemblies, with ministers and embassies from countries in Europe, North America, the Middle East, and East and Southeast Asia.

Longevity and you

Longevity will change the way our societies function. It isn't just about older people, it will impact everyone.

By 2030, one in six of us globally will be aged 60 or over – and by 2050, that figure will double to 2.1 billion, with four in five of us living in low- and middle-income countries.

That means adapting pensions, health systems, housing and work. What happens next is where we come in.

ILC brings three decades of international expertise in demographic change, helping governments, businesses and partners across the globe turn longevity into shared prosperity.

Working together to shape the response to long lives

ILC is the leading authority on the impact of longevity on society – combining evidence, solutions and networks to drive change, from local communities to the United Nations.

We take ideas from a blank page to a world stage. We start with the evidence, build the argument around what a decision-maker actually needs, and then put it in the room where the decision gets made – a finance ministry, a UN side event, a party conference fringe. We bring evidence and creativity to wherever the conversation needs to happen.

We are independent, trusted and end-to-end – from research to launch to lasting policy influence, with an international network that carries local insight to policymakers, parliamentarians, journalists and business leaders.

- Launched our Longevity Dividend Modelling Framework, helping G20 finance ministers quantify the economic and fiscal returns of healthier, more productive lives, guided by an advisory board of former finance ministers, senior policymakers and academics.
- Published global reports including Achieving Universal Health Coverage in low- and middle-income countries, Making China longevity-ready, and Mind the age gap: making mental health matter across the life course.
- Changed policy, persuading G20 finance ministers in Japan to commit to prevention, adding a life-course chapter to the WHO's Immunization Agenda 2030, and shaping UK government advocacy in China, Portugal and across the EU.

ILC is the leading authority on the impact of longevity on society. We are at the forefront of global policy on ageing and longevity.

We combine evidence, solutions and networks to make change happen. We help governments, policymakers, businesses and employers develop and implement solutions to ensure we all live happier, healthier and more fulfilling longer lives.

We want a society where tomorrow is better than today and where future generations are better off.
